

Divine Play Is Intrinsicly Bipolar

Dadaji Amiya Roy Chowdhury

Why not accept the saying: "God in His Supreme playfulness, by mere resolve, has been inclined to create the worlds and they were created forthwith."

Manifestation of God is the universe. Existence on earth is a manifestation of His Supreme Energy.

When an individual first appears in the womb of his mother, matter appears instantly. At that stage, mind lies in a state of inertia. But mind and matter are One. With their gradual manifestation, differences in them are identified. From that state onwards, the individual is in the domain of nature and a series of phenomena determine his every development. Sometimes it seems mechanical.

God has sent us here to experience His Divine Play. There is no birth or death. Everything goes on changing form in the stream of eternity. Being 'born' with a human body in this world is itself destiny. One who has a taste for God's Love wants to be born again and again with a human body because the taste of His love cannot be possible otherwise.

Your psychosomatic, mind-body existence is essentially feminine, responding back and forth to the polarity of life. Human beings have individual shape and gender according to Divine Will despite the fact that they originate from the same natural elements. All genders are dictated by the prompting of mind and ego. Moving and acting in the plane of mind, all are female and the only goal is to realise the Supreme Male.

When you take on a body in the realm of nature the power of Yogamaya, Divine creative force, is bound to create restrictions and obstacles in the life of individuals, families, societies and even nations.

Substance is One. This universe is the result of a long process of steady evolution. The world is only a small speck. You proceed from the general to the particular, but ultimately the general and particular become One.

Human beings are born to experience ananda, bliss, by tasting Divine love despite the illusory world in which we live. Have no fear. The entire paraphernalia of nature is the creation of the Supreme, the all-pervading Truth. Divine Play is intrinsicly bipolar, having positive and negative, ups and downs, good and bad. Oscillations between them provide the basis for all creative possibilities of Play.

When you are in the domain of nature, you have to acquiesce in Prarabdha, the evolutionary process of your life. When Play is over, the two poles coalesce into mere Existence, all existents having disappeared.

Try to know your birth, why you have come here and what your purpose is. God never created you for suffering, bondage or agony. Rather, He suffers for you because when you were born you forgot His purpose. Your ego is the root cause of suffering and bondage. Complete surrender to God is the only way to get rid of ego and know your purpose, which is to enjoy Play of the Divine. Then you will understand what birth is.

Space and time exist only in your mind. They each have infinite dimensions. Every segment of space is present in every other segment. Every split second also is present in every other second. So space and time are both ubiquitous (everywhere simultaneously). Time is ceaseless duration and space, an unfettered expanse. Matter is One. Indistinguishable, it wears different looks on different occasions. There is no dichotomy of matter and spirit; they are one integer and that is sole Reality. Post your comments at speakingtree.in
